

Volkswagen connections to Nazi Germany and Uyghur Region (Xinjiang), China

February 2024 update

“Forced labour is such an integral part of the government’s plan for total control that all products coming from the Uyghur Region, from cotton to solar panels, must be assumed to be tainted by forced and prison labour”. (Nury Turkel, Chairman, Uyghur Human Rights Project, 2019)

2024 update

In February 2024, new evidence provided by Dr. Adrian Zens, directly implicates Volkswagen in forced labour: The SAIC<sup>1</sup>-Volkswagen test track in Turpan, Uyghur Region, was built using transferred "Uyghur labourers" in military drill uniforms, where they were subjected to indoctrination, biometric data collection, assimilation and surveillance.

This entity not only employed transferred Uyghur labourers through so-called "poverty alleviation" projects, but also actively participated in government work teams monitoring Uyghur families, in arranging and hosting assimilatory “ethnic unity” activities, exhorting Uyghur children to diligently study Chinese, and in facilitating the transfer of Uyghur surplus labourers to state-arranged workplaces.

These findings implicate a Volkswagen-controlled entity not only in activities aiding state atrocities, but also in subjecting its own staff to forced labour, assimilation, surveillance and indoctrination.

Volkswagen operations and Uyghur forced labour

- Volkswagen has been operating the People’s Republic of China since 1984 and today has 33 plants across China. It has three Joint Ventures with Chinese motor corporations with varying degrees of ownership (between 25%-50%).
- In 2012 VW set up a plant in Urumqi, the heart of the Uyghur Region, as an equal Joint Venture with the state-owned company Shanghai Motor Corporation (SAIC) (part of the state-driven Great Western Development Strategy). The plant has 600 workers and produces up to 20,000 vehicles a year.
- According to the Chinese Automotive Associations (CAAM), when referring to VW, the contract demands "patriotic education" and "military training" for the employees. VW does not deny the existence of this agreement but stated that there has been no military training.<sup>2</sup> There is other evidence for high level Chinese government involvement in VW’s activities in China e.g. Chinese officials must have offices in each factory.
- In 2020, the company's CEO Group in China, Stephan Wollenstein, defended Volkswagen's presence in Xinjiang's capital, Urumqi "what happened in the Nazi times was something that happened in our factories where we had forced labour, people producing Volkswagen cars," he said, "This certainly is an unacceptable situation. Therefore, we are making sure that none of our production sites have forced labour, and this is something that we specifically checked in Urumqi and I can assure you, we do not have forced labour."
- But when asked whether he could be absolutely certain of that claim and give an assurance that none of the Urumqi workforce - of which around 25% is made up of Uyghurs and other minorities - had been in a camp, Dr Wollenstein said he could not.

- Additionally, a Volkswagen display and component supplier – Hefei Highbroad Advanced Material Co. Ltd (possibly under subsidiaries Hefei Fuying Photoelectric Co. Ltd or BOE Technology Group Co. Ltd) - is using thousands of Uyghur forced labourers in their factories as a part of their “poverty alleviation” programmes.

1930s and 1940s Nazi Germany

- Volkswagen was founded in 1937, as part of Nazi leader Adolf Hitler's vision to enable German families to own their first car. During the Second World War, the Wolfsburg-based firm manufactured vehicles for the German army, using more than 15,000 slave labourers from nearby concentration camps.
- The company operated four concentration camps and eight forced-labour camps on its property, where it used both Jewish and non-Jewish forced labour, primarily from eastern Europe.
- Volkswagen was also among the first companies to take advantage of the forced labour of Soviet prisoners of war.
- The company actively sought out forced labourers from the concentration camp system. One Volkswagen plant engineer travelled to Auschwitz and selected 300 skilled metal workers from the massive transports of Hungarian Jews in 1944. In addition, 650 Jewish women were transferred to assemble military munitions.

What you can do to help end Uyghur forced labour

As a Jewish organisation, we are asking Volkswagen, a company with historic links to Nazi Germany, to ensure it is on ‘the right side of history’ by ensuring its production and supply chains are not tainted by the stain of forced Uyghur labour.

- Write to the CEO of Volkswagen Group China, Mr. Stephen Wöllenstein, and demand a public announcement it will end all its operations in the Uyghur Xinjian region immediately. You can use this template.
- Ask your MP to call on the government to ban the import of products made with Uyghur forced labour.
- When shopping for a car, avoid Volkswagen, and any other brands known to be complicity I the exploitation of Uyghur forced labour – visit the Jewish World Watch Uyghur Forced Labour Database to find out which companies have links to Xinjiang
